VISITING BANGKOK: DRESS CODE & CULTURAL ETIQUETTE
for Grand Palace and Temples around Bangkok

Thailand is observing a period of royal mourning following the passing of Her Majesty Queen Sirikit, the Queen Mother. Visitors are warmly welcomed and encouraged to be mindful of local customs and traditions.

1. Respectful Attire | While mourning attire is not required for tourists, modest and respectful clothing is appreciated, particularly when visiting royal and religious sites.
2. Temples and Royal Sites | When visiting temples and the Grand Palace, shoulders and knees should be covered. Sleeveless tops, shorts and revealing clothing are generally not permitted. Please check opening hours in advance, as access may occasionally be affected by royal ceremonies.
3. Cultural Etiquette | Visitors are encouraged to behave respectfully at religious sites, royal landmarks and during ceremonial occasions. Please observe local customs and follow any instructions provided.
4. Respect for the Monarchy | The Thai monarchy holds significant cultural importance, and strict laws protect it from certain forms of criticism and insult. Visitors should be mindful of these laws and local sensitivities.
5. Tourism & Activities | Thailand welcomes visitors, with hotels, restaurants, transport services and tourist attractions operating as usual. Some activities or venues may occasionally be affected by royal ceremonies.
