Topic: “Ending the Epidemics of AIDS, malaria, and other diseases”

Reaffirming that through the means of communication, education, accessibility, and prevention epidemics can be eradicated,

Alarmed by the number of deaths caused by epidemics in developing countries, Fully aware of the individuals who will not cooperate,

Having considered other NGOs and other organizations that have already taken great initiative,

Noting with deep concern that these epidemics can easily destroy entire populations:

1. Calls for countries to fulfill monthly reports during times of epidemics that will include the number of infected, treated, and living people in a country until the issue is neutralized;
2. Recommends nations to conduct obligatory medical exams for all its citizens;
3. Calls upon developing nations to announce to make public their requests for monetary donations and provide results of research examining the spread of different infectious diseases within their country;
4. Expresses its hope that developed countries collect clinicians who volunteer to train clinicians in developing nations and provide medical aid and relief;
5. Recommends that nations assign UN peace-keeping troops to protect volunteering medical professionals when in developing countries in which there are active conflicts;
6. Further invites nations to support culturally-friendly aid provided by male and female medical professionals and that includes opportunities for alternative medication, including herbal medication;
7. Asks countries to educate their citizens on the spread of epidemics in schools, on public billboards, and through brochures with explanatory photographs;

8. Requests that small medical facilities are built in remote villages and areas with mandatory donations;
9. Strongly encourages NGO's and other organizations to form an agreement with WHO and pharmaceutical companies to supply developing nations with medications at lower costs
10. Further proclaims to educate citizens about safe sexual intercourse, sanitary initiatives, and seeking appropriate medical care when needed.
11. Further supports NGOs and governments in providing tools for preventing the spread of disease such as materials for maintaining good hygiene, malaria nets if needed, and materials for safe sexual practices.
