

G-20

Sponsors: Australia, Canada, China, France, India, Italy, Japan, Turkey, and United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland

Signatories: Argentina, Brazil, Germany, Mexico, Saudi Arabia, and South Korea

Topic: “Creating opportunities for the world’s smallest economies”

The G-20,

Deeply conscious about the need for higher education levels for properly functioning economies as well as for the improvement of security and health care,

Emphasizing the need for financial aid in LDCs,

Having considered further the proposition of using eco-friendly energy to create jobs in LDCs,

Taking into consideration the amount of immigration and the effects it has on economies,

Realizing that developing countries are not meeting their healthcare needs due to lack of money and lack of health-care,

Observing that developing countries are not meeting their security needs due to terrorism, corruption, radical groups, unstable governments, and lack of education and health,

1. Urges developed countries to send volunteers to LDCs to increase overall education levels;
2. Calls upon large economies to lend money to smaller economies, allowing smaller economies the opportunity for small scale monetary loan repayment;
3. Encourages developed countries to send eco-friendly energy sources to LDC’s and educate them on the use of these energy sources depending on the country and its climate;
4. Requests the help of developed countries to better the living environment of LDCs to reduce illegal immigrants in the future;
5. Endorses cheaper healthcare, medical supplies, and accessible medical hospitals to meet health requirements;
6. Endorses the presence of a strong local police force by providing regions with trainers from developed countries.

G-20

Sponsors: India, France, Italy, Canada, China, Indonesia, United States of America, Mexico, Saudi Arabia, Brazil, Argentina, Republic of Korea, Russian Federation, Turkey, United Kingdom, Australia and Germany.

Signatories: Japan.

Topic: “Reduction of food production worldwide”

The G-20, established in 1999, responding to the financial crisis and the recognition that smaller countries developing their economies were left out of discussions of global economies and governing,

Deeply concerned the G-20 realizes that organic food is highly prices and unavailable to people in poverty and thing all countries deserve to have the necessities of life,

1. Encourages developed counties to contribute their surplus of money for research, technology, and food;
2. Calls for education, as the educated will know more effective and useful ways of farming;
3. Endorses alternative agricultural plans like seed research facilities that would reserve agricultural land and produce healthy chemical free foods, this research will be available to everyone;
4. Recommends the use of government officials who every month monitor small farmers that agreed to a contained allotment of land and also make sure they are using crop rotations, sustainable agriculture, and the use of organic waste as fertilizers;
5. Reminds that mass production is damaging the environment through deforestation and disruption of ecosystems
 - a. Satellites should be used to monitor the forests and land being used
 - b. Records should be kept of the land’s status;
6. Regulates distributed food in order to encourage effective distributing;
7. Expresses the need for recyclable packaging for products and alternative eco-friendly transportation methods such as hybrid methods of transportation.