

Press Corps/British Broadcasting Corporation

Press Corps

Reporters: Guillermo Viter, Diego Olaro

Topic: WHO/Universal health coverage

Nowadays healthcare problems are often discussed around the world. Some important examples are as follows. Firstly the issue of lack of equipment around the world like the countries Ghana, Pakistan, etc. This issue makes it so that the citizens think that the country does not care about them. Like the delegate from Mozambique stated, "Two billion people cannot be tended to when they are very sick due to scarcity of doctors or economic problems of the country.

Also a fact, a very good fact from the delegate of Canada that goes hand in hand with the phrase that the delegate of Mozambique said is; "Right now there are 3 doctors available for 300 people". That is a huge problem. Now the delegates proposed to solve this problem by organizing things in groups. They have to help each other, make activities that benefit either the countries, and nature. This information was centered on purpose to be in hand with the topic I that is about universal health coverage. The second topic was about pandemic preparedness and response.

It is often said that it is impossible to find a solution to a pandemic but that is not totally true. There is not a direct solution but we can take measures such as start implementing the use of face masks. With these measures in place the countries would stop all the problems, therefore helping tons of sick people. A way all countries could help each other is by supplying medicine, face masks, and important machines for anyone who is really sick. This with the objective that the pandemic is not going to keep accelerating.

In addition citizens need to help by following the infrastructures of doctors and the government because if they don't follow the measures they want to be useful. All in all, the precautions and response is 50/50, half the citizens and government.