

Press Corps/Le Monde

Press Corps

Reporter: Diego Carpio

Topic: WHO/Universal health coverage

During this conference, the World Health Organization covered the topic of universal health coverage. We observed, questioned, and took notes throughout day one of the conference to determine which solutions the nations would propose in their resolution.

Some of the countries that we interviewed were; Finland, Bhutan and China. In Finland, they were successful with their health coverage even to this day as well as when Covid-19 was around. Since they have health coverage, they spend less energy on health issues because of the success during Covid-19 and being able to ship their medicinal properties.

However, with a country like Bhutan, it becomes a little bit harder to get health coverage because of how poor they are. The only way they get access to medicine is by having to book a flight but you were only allowed to leave in the 1960's.

In China, they do have health coverage but it is a little hard to try and get medicine. But, in China, it is a communist country so they increased their prices of their medicine because a lot of people were getting sick ever since Covid-19 was starting to spread up to a couple of years ago. But nowadays, Covid-19 hasn't really been a problem but the prices of their medicine have still been the same.

Overall, universal health coverage was clearly a pressing concern for all of the delegations in the World Health Organizations. Although there were many different solutions proposed, and different needs for different countries, they were able to come together to form a singular resolution that was adopted by consensus.